History of Yuma

BY TINA CLARK
ARCHAEOLOGIST AND HISTORIAN

For centuries, the Yuma Crossing has been viewed as both an oasis and a gateway.

The water of the Colorado River has provided life and sustenance for many generations of people.

First, they came to hunt, to camp, to mine and to farm. Most came to cross the mighty Colorado at its narrowest point and continue their journeys — first the Quechan, then the Spanish, then the Mexicans, and finally American and European explorers and settlers.

This was the only natural river crossing in the desert. It was here that the old tribal trails converged. Here natives, conquistadors, padres, adventurers, armies and immigrants met the river's challenge. Near this place where the Gila and Colorado rivers join, where the hot sun and rich soil make agriculture an ideal industry, the town of Yuma developed and prospered.

Since the arrival of the first Anglo settlers in the 19th century, Yuma has grown to a city of nearly 100,000. Counting communities around the city, the population of the metropolitan area has swelled to around 200,000.

While gold may have brought the Anglos here, agriculture became the area's traditional economy, with the harnessing of the Colorado River for irrigation. But in the century since then, the Yuma area's economy has diversified.

Having always had a presence here, the military became an economic mainstay in the latter half of the 20th century, with the establishment of Yuma Proving Ground and Marine Corps Air Station Yuma. Diversification continued in the following decades, as winter tourism became the third pillar of the area economy.

The Gold Rush

A singular great event occurred in 1848 that would make the Yuma Crossing a household word in countless American homes: the discovery of gold in California. When President Polk verified stories of the gold strike in California and declared that the wealth was so great “it could scarcely command belief,” the nation was said to have gone into “a state of delirium” in which it talked only of migrating west.

Yuma, situated at the mighty Colorado’s narrowest point, was the crossroads for these Forty-Niners, a group willing to risk all for the “pot of gold” believed to be there for the taking in California. Many were fortune hunters, but there were also those who had lost health or home and were looking only for a new beginning.

The importance of the Yuma Crossing to these people lay in the fact that it was the end of the perilous Gila Trail. It was an oasis in the desert where they began the last leg of their journey to the gold fields. The trail itself was a natural route west along the Gila River, popular because travelers could be reasonably certain of finding water and were free of at least one danger – freezing to death, as many did on the northern route through the Rockies.

Thousands of people crossed at Yuma into the emptiness of the desert, hailing from almost every nation in the world and every state in the union. These travelers and settlers embodied the pioneer spirit of the American West, and Yuma is a reflection of this important piece of American history.

Water: The New Gold

The 20th century brought a new “gold rush” all its own. The Reclamation Service began building the first dam and canal system on the Colorado River in the early 1900s. Taming and marshalling the river’s water to inhibit flooding and to irrigate the rich agricultural lands of the Yuma area has transformed Yuma into the “Winter Fresh Vegetable Capital of the United States” — a multibillion-dollar industry.

The role of the military has also been dramatically transformed. While in the 19th century, the role was one of quartermaster supply and defense of the crossing, the 20th and 21st centuries have led to a greater role for Yuma in the nation’s global and local commitments.

The Yuma Proving Ground and Marine Corps Air Station Yuma are vital to the nation’s defense. Yuma County’s farmland supplies up to 90 percent of the nation’s lettuce and other vegetables during the winter season.

Finally, Yuma is not simply a gateway to California. Over the last 50 years, millions of winter visitors have flocked to Yuma for the beautiful climate. Now, they are coming to enjoy the restored

Yuma riverfront, which includes two riverfront parks, seven miles of waterside trails, and nearly 400 acres of restored wetlands. Pivot Point Plaza recounts all the stories of the Yuma Crossing, featuring a restored 1907 Baldwin Locomotive on the original alignment of the first rail line into Arizona in 1877.

The view of the river from Interstate 8 is now that of beautiful parklands and wetlands — and this plaza that celebrates the historic Gateway to the Southwest. And the need for more conservation going into the future has only heightened water’s value to Yuma.

The Yuma canal system brings water to our vast areas of rich farmland.

The Cocopahs

The Cocopah Tribe, also known as the River People, have lived along the lower Colorado River and delta for centuries. Described as generous and non-materialistic, they have sustained their traditional and cultural beliefs through various political environments and ever-changing landscapes.

Historical records show that the Cocopah domain once included portions of Arizona, Southern California, and Sonora, Mexico. The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo divided the U.S.-Mexican border and the Cocopah lands between the two countries in 1848.

In 1917, President Woodrow Wilson signed an executive order that established the Cocopah Reservation.

In 1964, the Cocopahs founded their first constitution and formed a five-member tribal council. In the late 1970s and 1980s, the tribe began acquiring additional land, constructing homes, installing utilities, developing an infrastructure system and initiating economic development.

In 1985, the Cocopahs gained an additional 4,200 acres, including the North Reservation, through the Cocopah Land Acquisition Bill signed by President Ronald Reagan.

The Cocopah Reservation in Arizona consists of three noncontiguous bodies of land known as the North, West and East reservations, located southwest of Yuma. Today, they comprise more than 6,500 acres, much of which is leased as agricultural land to non-Indian farmers.

Currently, there are about 1,000 enrolled Cocopah Tribal members who live and work on or near the three reservations.

The tribe has numerous commercial ventures, including the Cocopah Casino located at 15318 S. Avenue B in Somerton, Cocopah Resort & Conference Center, Cocopah Rio Colorado Golf Course, Cocopah Museum, Cocopah RV and Golf Resort and Wild River Family Entertainment Center.

The Quechans

Members of the Quechan Tribe are descendants of the River People, the Yuma-speaking Indians who occupied lands along the lower Colorado River centuries ago. The language was the native tongue of southeastern California and southwestern Arizona.

Contact between tribal members and the area's European settlers, the Spanish conquistadors, was infrequent until 1780 when the Spanish began building a settlement at the confluence of the Colorado and Gila rivers that consisted of soldiers and Franciscan padres, whose mission included religious indoctrination of the native people.

But as the settlers strained the area's food supplies and sought to supplant traditional religious practices, the Quechans rebelled the following year, overthrowing the Spaniards. Anglos returned to the area to stay in the late 1840s as settlers arrived as part of the California Gold Rush.

The Quechan (pronounced "Kwatsáan") Reservation was established by executive order in 1884 and the tribal constitution was adopted in 1936. The name Quechan means “those who descended.”

Today, the tribe consists of about 3,200 members on a reservation covering about 45,000 acres in Imperial County in California and in Yuma County. It is governed by a seven-member council.

The tribe offers Yuma-area residents and winter visitors a number of commercial ventures, among which are the Quechan Casino Resort, located just south of Interstate 8 on the road to Los Algodones, Baja Calif.; Paradise Casino, 450 Quechan Drive in Winterhaven, Calif., several RV and trailer parks, a grocery store and more.

Surrounding Communities

Somerton

Somerton in 2018 celebrated its 100th anniversary as a city, marking the milestone with a new park at the base of the city water tower that rises up prominently on Somerton's skyline.

The park is one of a number of projects that promise to transform the city of more than 16,000 residents.

In progress is the redesign of Somerton's Main Street, a project city officials say will make downtown more pedestrian-friendly and help bring out-of-town visitors downtown. A network of "andadores," or walking paths, continues to grow into what's foreseen as a path for pedestrians, recreational walkers, cyclists and joggers going from point A to B.

Another project Somerton officials say is spurring downtown redevelopment is the recently built, larger City Hall building, located at State Avenue and Spring Street. Not only does it afford more elbow room for city employees to serve the public, say Somerton officials, it will act as a magnet attracting new businesses to the downtown.

Somerton is located in the heart of the fertile Yuma Valley and about 10 miles southwest of Yuma. Equidistant from the borders of California and Mexico, Somerton is also the native region of the Cocopah Tribe.

Though Somerton is heavily dependent on agriculture, its economy is becoming more diversified, with not only small businesses but light industry becoming more important.

Major employers within the city include the Somerton School District, city of Somerton, Regional Center for Border Health, Sunset Community Health Center, Del Sol Market, as well as a call center opened in 2015 by the Arizona Department of Economic Security.

Another large employer is the Cocopah Tribe, which has seven different entertainment, lodging and cultural attractions, including Cocopah Casino, Cocopah Resort & Conference Center, Cocopah Rio Colorado Golf Course, Cocopah Museum, Cocopah RV and Golf Resort, Cocopah Speedway and the Wild River Family Entertainment Center.

The city's youth are educated at five schools in the Somerton Elementary School District. At present, most teens attend high school in Yuma, but in 2015 voters in Yuma County approved a bond issue to finance construction of a new high school in Somerton.

Somerton is home to the Somerton Tamale Festival, an event in December that brings together tens of thousands of people to enjoy a staple of traditional Mexican cuisine. The event is hosted by the El Diablito Arizona State University Alumni Chapter to raise scholarship money for area students who will attend ASU.

But that's not the only popular celebration in Somerton. The city hosts a 4th of July celebration attended by thousands of people from around the region.

Other popular events include Somerton Corn Fest, a festival in November that pays homage to the area's agricultural industry; Somerton Greater Days Reunion Festival, which celebrates the city's founding, and Petpalooza, an event for pet lovers and their animals.

Wellton

Founded in 1878, Wellton was originally known as “Well Town,” named for wells drilled in the area to supply water to the railroad. It was incorporated as a town almost a century later, in 1970.

Located east of Yuma on the opposite side of the Gila Mountains, Wellton’s main industry continues to be agriculture, although it draws growing numbers of winter visitors attracted to the community’s slower, easygoing lifestyle.

Today, it is home to more than 3,000 residents, according to the most recent Census estimate. In the winter months, with the arrival of winter visitors, the population increases by as much as double.

Wellton’s growth and increasing popularity among winter residents has prompted the town to add amenities in recent years, including a Family Services Center, the 18-hole Butterfield Golf Course, a community center, and N.D. & Katie Kline pool. Golfers who like to tee off in the desert can also play 18 holes at the Links at Coyote Wash on the south side of Interstate 8.

The town also has a branch of Yuma County’s library system, and a museum – the Wellton-Mohawk Fine Arts and Historical Association. In addition, Arizona Western College has built a branch campus in Wellton to serve residents of the town and other areas of East County.

Children and teens are educated at Wellton Elementary School and Antelope Union High School in nearby Roll.

Wellton also is the site of several events that attract visitors from around Yuma County. These events include the Wellton-Mohawk Tractor Rodeo, the Pioneer Days celebration, Wellton World of Wheels Car Show, Water Dog Day, a 4th of July observance that includes fireworks, Veterans Day Parade, Thanksgiving dinner and a Christmas tree lighting ceremony in Westside Park.

San Luis

Having incorporated in 1979, San Luis is Yuma County's youngest municipality. But the community's history is longer than that.

Its beginnings date back to 1930, when the United States opened a port of entry across from San Luis Rio Colorado, Son. Over the next several decades, its population consisted mainly of farm labor families who lived within a two-block area north of the Mexican border.

In the 1950s, the population hovered at around 200 residents but then climbed in the 1960s, primarily as a result of the Bracero program that brought Mexican farmworkers and their families to the United States.

In 1961, Jose Urtzuastegui opened the city's first gasoline station, The Flying A, on Main Street, a block north of the border line. And in 1965, Chevron became the first major business chain located in San Luis when it opened a service station, which was operated by Enrique Fletes.

In succeeding years, more business chains turned their eyes to San Luis in response to the prospect of doing business with shoppers from neighboring Mexico.

In 1977, a group of residents and merchants who called themselves the San Luis Committee for Progress launched a petition drive calling on the Yuma County Board of Supervisors to incorporate their community.

Committee members were dissatisfied with the level of service the community had been receiving from the county, and they saw municipal government as a way for the community to create a police force of its own, upgrade its streets, provide recreational opportunities for youth and build a sewer treatment plant for residents.

In 1979, the board of supervisors approved the petition, making San Luis the county's fourth incorporated community, governed by a seven-member council.

At the time of incorporation, San Luis had about 2,000 residents, but today, according to the most recent Census estimate, the population is over 34,000.

The area's main industry is agriculture, but large employers in the city include the city of San Luis, the ACT call center, Gadsden Elementary School District and the Arizona State Prison, as well as Emerald Correction Management, a Louisiana firm that manages the city-owned detention facility that houses federal prisoners for U.S. law enforcement agencies.

San Luis has a branch of Arizona Western College, and the city's children and teens are educated by eight schools in the Gadsden Elementary School District, San Luis High School, as well as Harvest Preparatory Academy, a charter elementary and high school.

Popular community events in San Luis include the Founders Day celebration, Miss San Luis Scholarship Pageant, Angeles Del Barrio Christmas festival, Fourth of July celebration and Dia del Campesino, which celebrates the contributions of the area's farmworkers.

The Foothills

The Foothills is no longer a footnote. Back in the day, the Gila Mountains foothills were just a place to rest on the way to the river.

That all changed in the 1960s when a man named Henry (Hank) Schechert came up with a vision for a development where people could live close to the desert, and bought up about 3,000 acres. Because Yumans doubted anyone would want to live “in the middle of nowhere,” it was first known as “Hank’s Folly.”

Schertch’s first subdivision was at Foothills Boulevard and 40th Street, where lots cost $1,295 and $1,495. Since then, more than 10,000 residential lots have been sold, and about 27,000 year-round residents call the Foothills home, a number that nearly doubles during the winter.

Commercial development has also exploded, and the Foothills now boast “destination” shopping and dining spots, along with four golf courses, a private pool and fitness center, and the Foothills branch library.

Hikers and off-roaders still explore the desert along Fortuna Wash and the vast Barry M. Goldwater Air Force Range, and stargazers delight in the darker skies. The popular Telegraph Pass hike also begins here.

An annual Foothills Parade of Christmas Lights starts at Foothills Boulevard and 46th Street on three evenings the week before Christmas, showcasing a different route each night.

Mountain Shadows Artists Association holds its annual juried art show at the Foothills library and hosts its popular ARTrails tour of its members’ studios, info at mtnsaa.org.

Foothills Rotary remembers the legacy of Schechert – who died in 1998 at the age of 82 – with its “Hank Days” parade, barbecue and car show every February, info at HankDays.com.

Quality of Life

If you love blue skies and sunshine, Yuma is the place to be. In fact, the city holds the Guinness World Record as the sunniest place on earth, with clear skies prevailing a mean of 4,055 hours of a possible 4,456 hours every year, or 91 percent of the time.

Yuma County residents enjoy a temperate climate for most of the year, a good education system that includes both a community college and branches of state universities, year-round entertainment and recreational opportunities and lots of options for affordable shopping.

And they can enjoy all those attributes at a pace considerably slower than the hustle and bustle of larger cities.

Yuma is centrally located by the Colorado River and several lakes, any one of which afford a pleasurable day of boating, fishing, swimming or water skiing.

In fact, the river is a draw for tourists, with many of the thousands of boaters and other water enthusiasts who gather at the river or upstream at Martinez Lake coming from San Diego and other parts of California.

The lakes and the river's beaches offer a pleasant break from summer temperatures. And while triple digits aren't uncommon during the months of June through September, residents find the heat to be a small price to pay for the milder climate that follows.

Highs drop into the 90s by October and continue falling to the 70s in the winter — still short-sleeve weather by many standards.

But no matter the season, sunny skies prevail in Yuma County.

It's no coincidence that for up to three-quarters of the year, from about October to May, Yuma draws tens of thousands of winter visitors who otherwise might be shoveling snow or contending with rain in their homes in the north, including a large percentage of Canadians.

Not counting the thousands of winter residents, Yuma County's year-round population was 212,128 in 2018, according to estimates by the U.S. Census Bureau, which is a 6 percent growth from 2010, when the population was 195,750.

Even as it grows, the Yuma area retains the small-town charms that attracted so many people in the first place. Commutes tend to be short, and people who live in the Foothills, Wellton and other outlying areas don't face bumper-to-bumper gridlock on highways if they happen to commute between home and jobs in Yuma, the hub of the county.

According to the Census Bureau, the city of Yuma accounts for nearly half the county's total population, with an estimated 104,000 people living within the Yuma city limits in 2018.

Much of the population surge is occurring in the southern half of the county, where the cities of San Luis and Somerton have experienced tremendous growth. San Luis went from 15,322 residents counted in the 2000 census to an estimated 34,778 in 2018, while Somerton's population grew from 7,266 in 2000 to an estimated 16,554 in 2018.

The Census Bureau also estimates that 25 percent of the countywide population is made up of residents under the age of 18.

Depending on where in the county they live, residents' children are served by one of seven elementary school districts and two high school districts. But for those parents who want other options for their kids, numerous charter, parochial and private schools have been established throughout the area at both the elementary and secondary levels.

Arizona Western College serves local residents and even international students seeking to continue their education. Today, it offers associate degrees and certificates in about 100 academic programs at its main campus in Yuma, plus satellite campuses in San Luis, Ariz., Somerton, Wellton and Marine Corps Air Station Yuma. The college also serves neighboring La Paz County with campuses in Parker and Quartzsite.

Having earned their associate degrees, AWC graduates can continue their studies toward bachelor or master degrees at the Northern Arizona University-Yuma branch, which shares the AWC campus under an arrangement that dates to the late 1980s.

Since 2015, students at AWC's Yuma campus are able to complete a bachelor's degree through a partnership with Arizona State University.

For the convenience of area residents who are juggling academic aspirations with other responsibilities, the University of Arizona also offers degree programs in Yuma.

Yuma and the communities surrounding it also boast lively arts and cultural scenes.

Through their parks and recreation departments, the cities of Yuma and San Luis offer a variety of arts and performing arts exhibitions. Across the county, numerous independent arts, crafts and cultural groups also offer memberships and entertainment, such as Yuma Com-

For residents whose idea of relaxation is to work up a sweat, Yuma, San Luis and Somerton have athletic and recreational programs through their parks and recreation departments. They and the town of Wellton also have parks, pools and other athletic facilities where walkers, joggers, golfers, swimmers, softball and soccer players and others can pursue their pastimes.

Yuma County is a destination for anglers, boaters and water skiers, as well as hunters, bicyclists, desert hikers, campers and off-roading enthusiasts.

The county is nationally famous for its dove hunting, and the first two weeks of each September hunters not only from Yuma but also from California and around Arizona and more far-flung areas gather in the fields to try to bag their limits of mourning and whitewinged doves.

Hunters also stalk desert bighorn sheep in the Kofa National Wildlife Refuge. That area and others around the county also provide habitat for mule deer that is also a popular quarry.

The Kofas are among a number of popular destinations for campers. Meanwhile, thousands of off-roading enthusiasts ride their all-terrain vehicles to the Imperial Sand Dunes in neighboring California in the winter.

The range of goods and services conveniently available to residents has broadened in recent years as more businesses locate there to serve the growing population of Yuma County.

With all that is available locally, residents have more reasons than ever before to stay home to shop and play.

Business and the Economy

Economy

If Yuma County were a country, its nearly $6.4 billion Gross Domestic Product would rank 171 out of 230 countries, according to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis. Yes, that's countries.

Private industry contributed $5.75 billion and government spending contributed $640 million to the GDP, defined as the monetary value of all finished goods and services produced within a region's borders.

The local economy often is described as a three-legged stool, with agriculture, the military and tourism being the largest contributors.

Mexican Spending

Mexican visitors spend an estimated $2.2 billion on food, clothing, entertainment and other activities in Yuma County each year, according to a speaker at an economic forum in 2012. That represents more than 6 percent of all taxable sales.

And that spending directly supports more than 2,000 local jobs. "They're huge day trippers," Linda Morgan, executive director of Yuma Visitors Bureau, said of Yuma's visitors from Mexico. They come over to see family, eat in restaurants and shop.

During the winter produce season, thousands of people cross the border every day to work in Yuma's fields. Many come back to spend their paychecks here.

Tourism

Yuma's sunshine and lovely winter weather have been drawing visitors here for decades.

Some are just passing through and make a quick pit stop. Others come and stay for months at a time to bask in Yuma's warm winters and equally warm and friendly people. Some are here for a few days or weeks on business or to visit friends and family.

Thousands come in the winter to play at the sand dunes and in the summer to cool off in the Colorado River and nearby lakes. Yet others are attracted to such special events as Midnight at the Oasis, dove hunting or other festivals and celebrations. Many come and stay in a Yuma hotel while undergoing medical and dental treatment in Mexico.

Yuma County is also a good place to partake in "agritourism." Hands-on farm tours allow visitors to enjoy both the vegetables and mild weather that make Yuma winters famous.

And each year, thousands of people from colder climates migrate to Yuma for the winter months to escape the freezing temperatures, snow and ice from back home. Counting them is a bit elusive, but estimates place the number at more than 80,000 during the peak of the winter season in January and February. About 30,000 of them come from Canada.

They may initially come as winter visitors, staying in a hotel or arriving in their motorhome, but many purchase a home here and make the transition to winter residents.

Whatever the reason and length of their stay, visitors to Yuma bring outside dollars to the local economy as they buy gas and food, obtain housing, visit area attractions and shop.

Tourists had a direct travel spending impact of $745 million in 2017 in Yuma's Legislative District 13, which contributed to 6,400 jobs, according to the latest tourism study. It also showed a travel impact of $398 million and 3,300 jobs in Legislative District 4.

And tourist spending resulted in $19 million in local taxes and $19 million in state taxes in District 4 and $31 million in local taxes and $31 million in state taxes in District 13.

Departments in the state.

Driven by the mission “to improve the health and well-being of individuals, families, and the communities we serve,” Yuma Regional Medical Center continues to invest in new facilities, technologies and services.

YRMC provides patients with an electronic health record system called MyCare a tool that joins with the personal touch of caregivers at the bedside to produce a new level of information sharing, communication and safety mechanisms. This single health record enables caregivers at YRMC, affiliate clinics and participating community providers to securely access the same information.

Patients can take advantage of MyCare as a computerized version of their paper medical record as it contains all the information required to care for that person, such as their medical history, insurance and contact information.

Quality health care is a top priority for Yuma Regional Medical Center. Many of the hundreds of physicians and allied health professionals on YRMC’s medical staff are board-certified or board-eligible in their specialty. Patients, physicians and employees recognize that YRMC is top in the nation.

In 2014, the hospital built a new support services building on the south side of the campus and the administrative offices moved in. It’s also the home of the volunteer center and human resources, which moved over from the YRMC Corporate Center.

With the relocation of administrative offices, the final portion of the east wing of the hospital was demolished. That cleared the site of the original hospital, built in 1958, to make way for the new, expanded, state-of-the-art Emergency Department which opened in winter of 2016.

The 58,500-square-foot Emergency Department occupies the ground floor of the new building, which is designed as a future tower with four more floors to provide for more space as the hospital continues to grow.

Two stories of the new structure are underground for an underground parking garage. The ED at YRMC includes a front entrance, Emergency Department Lobby, bigger ambulance bays, and two helipads capable of supporting two Blackhawk helicopters.

In 2017, YRMC signed an agreement with AeroCare, an Arizona-based emergency air transport company. YRMC has a dedicated fleet of emergency transport aircraft including two helicopters, one or both of which can often be seen stationed at YRMC’s helipads for more immediate use, as well as an airplane kept at Yuma International Airport should the need arise.

The Emergency Department increased bed capacity from 37 beds to 72, which will allow it to accommodate more than 100,000 visits a year, compared to 72,000 previously. Shelled space allows for an additional 24 beds to be added meeting future needs.

The Yuma Regional Medical Center Cancer Center is located in a 38,000-square-foot facility, built across 24th Street from the YRMC campus, and provides all cancer services in one location, including medical and radiation oncology, oncology pharmacy, laboratory services, infusion rooms, resource center and support services. In 2018, The Commission on Cancer, a quality program of the American College of Surgeons, granted three-year accreditation to the cancer program at YRMC Cancer Center.

In 2017, Yuma Regional Medical Center opened the doors to the new location for its Family Medicine Center, which offers various medical services including preventative care, cold and flu, chronic disease management, pediatric care, women’s health, minor injuries, weight management, dermatology and mental health services. The facility features 36 exam rooms, which is up from 22 rooms at the previous location.

Putting quality family care as a top priority, in 2017 YRMC partnered with the Prolacta Bioscience company to implement human donor milk in the hospital’s Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU).

In the fall of 2020, the hospital announced plans to begin construction in the first half of 2021 of a campus in the Foothills that will serve that growing community as well as the east county.

Being a top performer begins with great employees, and YRMC is no exception.

YRMC has been recognized as a top employer at the national and local levels, including the AARP's Top 50 Places to Work for People Over 50, Arizona State Non-Profit Diversity Champion and the overall award winner of the "Great Place to Work" in Yuma.

In 2015, Healthy Arizona Worksite Program presented YRMC's Wellness Program with a silver-level award for the hospital's efforts in implementing health and wellness initiatives. The award recognizes YRMC for its efforts to positively affect the health and well-being of its employees, their families and the community by implementing comprehensive worksite wellness strategies.

Yuma Regional Medical Center's CareLine offers a free service designed to meet one's health care needs at the touch of a button. Whether it's finding a doctor, locating medical services or needing medical advice from a registered nurse, this skilled nursing team is ready to assist anyone who needs help. A free service provided by Yuma Regional Medical Center, the CareLine offers free medical advice 24 hours/seven days a week. Call the CareLine at 928-336-CARE (2273).

In partnership with YRMC and Encompass Health, Yuma Rehabilitation Hospital is a 60-bed freestanding acute rehabilitation hospital that contains a spacious therapy gym, mobility courtyard, a cafeteria and large patient rooms. The hospital also features over 18 specialized rehabilitation services and programs. These programs help improve the quality of life for people who have survived illness or injury and help them return to their prior lifestyles and levels of independence. These programs and services include the following:

Outpatient Services

- Physical Therapy
- Occupational Therapy
- Speech Therapy
- Sports Medicine
- General Orthopedics

Inpatient Services

- Rehabilitation Nursing
- Occupational Therapy

- Physical Therapy
- Psychology
- Respiratory Therapy
- Speech-Language Pathology
- Dietary and Nutritional Counseling
- Case Management

Using the latest rehabilitative technology and techniques, the Yuma Rehabilitation Hospital helps individuals achieve their greatest level of function as quickly as possible, so they may return to work, to play and to live a full life.

In addition to these two great facilities, Yuma County is served by many other private practice medical providers.

Agriculture in Yuma

Yuma might be in the desert southwest, but it is certainly no food desert.

Agriculture is the area's leading economic driver, putting an estimated $3.2 billion a year into the local and state economy each year. Yuma County cash receipts for 2016 totaled $1.5 billion, $1.2 billion of which was from crops.

Several things account for that lofty total: Plentiful sunshine, rich soil, progressive farmers, ample labor and senior rights to irrigation water from the Colorado River.

Leading the way, as it has for years, is the production of lettuce — from iceberg to leafy green varieties.

Lettuce is by far the largest crop grown here, with its production, harvesting and processing resulting in a bustle of activity throughout the winter months.

In total, area farmers grow roughly 100,000 acres of leafy greens a year, producing around 80 percent of the nation's winter supply of the crop in recent years, and earning Yuma the title of "Winter Lettuce Capital."

Alongside lettuce fields, local farmers also grow broccoli, cauliflower, spinach and other vegetables during the winter. Vegetable seed to start new crops is also an important product.

At one time, iceberg lettuce — named "iceberg" because it used to be packed in ice in rail cars for transport across the country — led the field. But it's losing ground to romaine and leaf lettuce varieties considered to be tastier and more nutritious.

With increasing frequency, the lettuce is washed, chopped, mixed with shredded carrots and packaged in ready-to-eat salad bags or containers. Also increasingly popular are the spring mix salads with the whole leaves of "baby" plants such as lolla rosa, mizuna, tatsoi and arugula, among others.

This has given rise to a bustling food processing industry. The Yuma area is home to 11 salad plants that produce bagged lettuce and salad mixes. During peak production months, each of those plants processes more than 2 million pounds of lettuce per day.

There are also 24 cooling plants in the Yuma area, where powerful refrigeration units quickly cool truck-sized loads of vegetables that are then loaded into caravans of semi-trucks. Crops harvested here in the morning can be in Phoenix by afternoon and on the East Coast in three to four days.

But Yuma isn't just a salad bowl.

It grows more than 175 different crops throughout the year from A to Z — alfalfa, cotton, dates, kale, lemons, melons and wheat, just to name a few.

Arizona is the second largest producer of dates in the country after California, with 3,500 acres of production.

Yuma County primarily grows medjool dates, a type of tree fruit that originated in the Middle East and North Africa, but can be cultivated in Yuma's desert environment.

About 26 million pounds of dates are produced annually in Arizona, accounting for a $97 million industry by itself.

Yuma is a national center of agricultural production and has the highest value of agricultural production in Arizona.

According to a 2017 University of Arizona study, Yuma County ranks in the top 1 percent among U.S. counties in the sale of all agriculture products and is in the top 0.1 percent for vegetables and melons.

Yuma County also ranks first in Arizona for lemons, as well as watermelons and cantaloupes. Meanwhile, a local feedlot has over 100,000 head of feeder beef cattle.

In Yuma, wheat is commonly grown in rotation with vegetable and melon crops. The Desert Durum wheat grown here is considered a premium by Italian pasta makers.

Yuma growers also grow kosher wheat to be used by Orthodox Jews to bake matzo (or matzoh), the unleavened bread wafers that are eaten at Passover. Because the rules for kosher production include that the wheat not receive moisture immediately prior to harvest, Yuma's desert conditions and controlled irrigation make it a perfect spot to grow this specialty crop.

Military and Yuma

Yuma County has a rich military history. Home to two military installations, the community both celebrates and embraces its military family.

The presence of the military in Yuma goes back to 1852, when the U.S. Army established Fort Yuma on the California side of the Colorado River. The fort overlooked the Yuma Crossing - a narrow spot where the river squeezed between rock walls - the site that later became the city of Yuma.

Today, the U.S. Army Yuma Proving Ground fulfills a vital role in maintaining the technical excellence and high quality of America's military arsenal, while Marine Corps Air Station Yuma supports 80 percent of the Corps' air-to-ground aviation training.

There are also thousands of military retirees who decided to settle in the Yuma area after serving their country. Whether it's the convenience of living near the two installations, the opportunities and security it provides them, or the economic benefits, many viewed living here as having a lot to offer, so they stayed.

The military is also the second largest contributor to the local economy after agriculture, with YPG ($450 million) and MCAS Yuma ($653 million) generating more than a billion dollars a year in combined revenue for the city and state's coffers.

Yuma Proving Ground

Yuma Proving Ground traces its history back to World War II with the Desert Training Center, where troops trained for combat in North Africa, and the Yuma Test Branch, a site for testing combat bridge designs.

In 1942, Maj. Gen. George S. Patton established the Desert Training Center across a swath of desert from the Mexican border to Nevada. More than one million men trained for combat at camps including Hyder, Horn, Laguna and Pilot Knob in the Yuma area.

Then, in 1943, the Army opened the Yuma Test Branch near the newly built Imperial Dam. Because the river's flow could be controlled there, it was the perfect spot to test bridging equipment. Tires made from synthetic rubber and other equipment also were tested in the Imperial Sand Dunes.

Following the end of the war, however, the Yuma Test Branch was closed. It was reopened in 1951 - with a greatly expanded mission - as Yuma Proving Ground. Visitors can learn more about YPG's history and current mission at the proving ground's Heritage Center Museum, which is free and open to the public year round each Tuesday through Friday.

Today, at 1,300 square miles, YPG is one of the largest military installations in the world, which makes it capable of testing nearly everything in the Army's ground combat arsenal. It is also the county's largest single civilian employer, with a workforce of about 2,400 employees.

A part of the Army Test and Evaluation Command, YPG's mission is to conduct tests on medium and long range artillery, aircraft armament and sensor systems, cargo and personnel airdrop systems, unmanned aircraft, armored vehicles and automotive equipment, technologies for defeating roadside bombs, and much more.

Between 70 and 90 individual test programs take place at the proving ground each week. In the typical year, over 600,000 mortar, missile, and small arms rounds are fired, as well as 18,000 rounds of artillery, 1,000 cargo parachute drops and 39,000 personnel parachute jumps.

In 2017, workers at YPG performed more than 1.8 million man-hours of work, including driving 140,000 grueling road miles in tracked and wheeled vehicles.

YPG has had a huge and varied testing workload over its history, including the Apache helicopter, M-1 Abrams tank, Bradley Fighting Vehicle, Stryker armored vehicle, the M777 lightweight 155mm howitzer, and the Mine-Resistant Ambush Protected (MRAP) vehicle. Virtually all of the Army's artillery and ground weapon systems, mine, counter-mine and demolitions testing and the global positioning system (GPS) were also tested there.

Also, between test customers, training units, government and foreign dignitaries, local organizations, and school groups, YPG now hosts more than 30,000 visitors every year, making it a substantial contributor to the local hospitality industry.

The installation has one of the longest overland artillery ranges (40 miles) in the nation, the most highly instrumented helicopter armament test range in the Department of Defense, over 240 miles of improved road courses for testing tracked and wheeled vehicles, and well over 1,000 miles of fiber-optic cable linking test locations.

YPG also features the most modern mine and demolitions test facility in the western hemisphere, and unique urban areas specifically constructed to defeat the threat of improvised explosive devices. There are also six airfields, with extensive unmanned aerial system testing offered in restricted airspace over a variety of terrain conditions. Unmanned aircraft testing, as well as, testing equipment used to "counter" the threat of unmanned aircraft are both growth areas.

It is also home to the Military Freefall School, part of the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School, a joint forces training organization covering all aspects of military parachuting. The training allows Special Forces troops to train for missions involving free falls from aircraft.

A vertical wind tunnel opened at the proving ground in 2014, and at 75 feet tall, is one of the world's largest free fall simulators, with an additional 20 feet underground. The U.S. Air Force also operates a helium-filled aerostat balloon in YPG airspace, part of a radar "fence" guarding against planes smuggling drugs across the border.

On the non-military side, a hot-weather test track was opened at YPG in 2009 through a joint-use agreement with General Motors. Since 2006, YPG has conducted numerous air drop tests of large parachutes for NASA in support of the Orion deep space exploration program.

Marine Corps Air Station

Marine Corps Air Station Yuma's history dates back to 1928 when Col. Benjamin F. Fly persuaded the federal government to lease 640 acres of desert from Yuma County. For the low price of $1 per year, the government leased Fly Field for 20 years with an option for an additional 20 years.

Aviation was in its infancy then and Fly Field became the center of attention in Yuma. During the summer of 1928, it was a stopover point for 25 planes in a New York to Los Angeles air race, a popular spectacle of the rapidly advancing world of aviation.

The first plane to land in Arizona touched down here in Yuma in Oct. 25, 1911, when Robert Fowler made a stop on a cross-country flight from Santa Monica to Florida.

Piloting a Wright Model B biplane (also known as a "Cole Flyer") with an engine rented from the Wright Brothers, Fowler landed in Yuma near what was then a ball field. In 2010, a new statue of Fowler was dedicated at the site (195 S. 4th Ave., in front of the Yuma Landing Restaurant).

One of the first airports in Arizona, Fly Field was used sporadically by private aircraft until 1941, when the U.S. government, through the Civil Aeronautics Administration, authorized an expenditure for permanent runways. In 1929, the famed aviatrix Amelia Earhart ran off the runway in Yuma while competing in the first Women's Air Derby.

When the United States entered World War II, engineers built an air base. By early 1943, Yuma Army Air Field began graduating classes of pilots. The base became one of the busiest flying schools in the nation, training pilots of AT-6 single-engine trainers, T-17 multi-engine trainers and B-17 Flying Fortresses.

At the end of the war, all flight activity here ceased and the area was partially reclaimed by the desert. During the period of inactivity, it was controlled successively by the War Assets Administration, the U.S. Corps of Engineers and the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Reclamation, which used it as a headquarters for its irrigation projects.

Then, on July 7, 1951, the Air Force reactivated the base and the 4750th Air Base Squadron resumed training as part of the Western Air Defense Forces. The airfield was renamed Vincent Air Force Base in 1956 in memory of Brig. Gen. Clinton D. Vincent, a pioneer of bombing techniques who died in 1955. It was signed over to the Navy in 1959 and has been a Marine Corps facility ever since.

Today MCAS Yuma continues to be the busiest aviation facility in the Marines, supporting approximately 80 percent of the Corps' air-to-ground weapons training, with its access to 2.8 million acres of training ranges in Arizona and California, and superb flying weather.

Each year, numerous aviation units come to MCAS Yuma for training for periods lasting from a few days to seven weeks. In 2017, the air station hosted 40 rotational units, consisting of 483 aircraft and more than 10,000 military personnel and various foreign forces.

One of the main contributors to that influx is the Weapons and Tactics Instructor course, hosted twice a year by Aviation Weapons and Tactics Squadron 1 (MAWTS-1). The event brings thousands of Marines to Yuma from around the world. During both courses, MCAS Yuma coordinates with the city of Yuma to conduct urban training within the city limits, specifically in the form of foreign humanitarian assistance training at selected parks and school athletic fields.

The air station is also home to Marine Aircraft Group 13 (MAG-13), which is comprised of two squadrons of AV-8B Harriers - which are VMA-214 and VMA-311 - Marine Aviation Logistics Squadron 13 (MALS-13) Marine Wing Support Squadron 371 (MWSS - 371) Marine Unmanned Aerial Vehicle Squadron 1 (VMU-1), and one F-35 squadron, VMFA - 211.

In January 2017 VMFA-121 was permanently transferred to Iwakuni, Japan. Marine Operational Test and Evaluation Squadron 22 (VMX-1), continued to grow, adding personnel and aircraft. Once the squadron is fully formed it will have around 500 Marines and about 20 aircraft, including the MV-22 Osprey, AH-1 Viper, UH-1 Venom, CH-53K Super Stallion and F-35, which is every type of aircraft flown by Marine pilots.

In 2016, MCAS Yuma began construction of a 25-megawatt micro grid to provide energy to the air station in the event of a major electrical grid failure. The facility, which opened in December of the same year, is owned and operated by APS and generates power exported to the municipal power grid, helping to meet the energy demands of the Yuma community.

Other additional community support in 2017 included tours of the air station for schools, JROTC and Civil Air Patrol groups. The MCAS Yuma Fire Department also responded to 275 incidents involving fires, medical calls, and vehicle crashes, or served on standby status for the Yuma and Somerton Fire Departments. MCAS Yuma Search and Rescue conducted 13 rescue operations in Yuma County as well.

In March of 2018, MCAS Yuma hosted the 54th Yuma Air Show, which featured aerial displays and acrobatics, drawing an estimated 23,800 visitors to the air station. In addition, MCAS Yuma provided 17 Color Guard Details for community events displaying the nation's flag and Marine Corps Colors. Also, 14 funeral services were held that included a burial and rifle detail.

Individual Marines and civilian employees support the community in a myriad of other service activities, which range from coaching sporting events for children to helping with the Special Olympics. MCAS Yuma military police also help the Yuma Police Department with traffic control for larger community events during the year. In addition, nine military working dog (K-9) demonstrations were given to local organizations and schools.

VMFT-401 personnel, with the assistance of volunteers from MCAS Yuma, conduct the Toys-for-Tots toy drive each year, which collects monetary donations and toys for families in need in the community.

Yuma and the Marine Corps have a unique relationship. The city of Yuma is the only place in the country where the Marine Corps is allowed to conduct simulated training missions out in the community, which provides its Marines and pilots with realistic training in an urban environment.

Also unlike many places, the city and county always include MCAS Yuma in meetings and other discussions whenever compatible development and encroachment concerns need to be addressed.

MCAS Yuma also is the only joint-use air station in the Marine Corps, sharing facilities with Yuma International Airport. MCAS maintains the airport's runways and taxiways, and provides air traffic control, security and emergency services for both "sides" of the airport. The main runway at MCAS Yuma is 13,300 feet long and contains enough concrete to pave 37 miles of two-lane highway.

Winter Visitors

Winters in Yuma draw a unique migration pattern each year. Winter visitors from all points north, who flock to the Desert Southwest, lured by the lovely palm trees and fabulous weather.

Just how many winter visitors come here from October through March tends to be an elusive - and fluid - number. But best estimates place them at some 80,000 people in the peak of the season, generally considered to be February before rising temperatures here and the lure of home have them packing up again.

Considering that the city of Yuma's year-round population is around 95,000, that's a big seasonal influx of people to the community.

A few stay in hotels. Some camp on public lands in tight-knit little communities. Others rent a lot, park their fifth wheel trailer and set out the lawn chairs. Still others put down more permanent roots, purchasing a lot for a park model home or a bricks-and-mortar house.

Winter visitors come to escape the cold weather back home. But they love Yuma not only for its warm sunshine, but its friendly people, the ease with which they can get around and the plenitude of activities to occupy them. And they fall in love with the Yuma area, a place they've come to regard as a home away from home.

Retired military people find appeal in the services Yuma's military bases provide them, and in the "sound of freedom" of military jets flying overhead. Retired farmers come to enjoy the diversity of winter crops grown here. Others come because they have friends or family here.

Some come just for a short visit and end up returning.

No matter the numbers, they have a huge impact on the area.

They hit the casinos, browse the swap meets, attend arts and crafts shows and fill seats at concerts. They enjoy hiking in the desert, playing golf and fishing. They visit Mexico for medical and dental treatment and stay to linger over lunch and margaritas.

It's a good life. Today's winter visitors tend to be younger than their predecessors and they're more active.

Many give back to their winter home. They volunteer at Yuma Regional Medical Center and help fill food boxes at Yuma Community Food Bank, serve meals at Crossroads Mission, donate to the Humane Society of Yuma and lend a hand to the Salvation Army's annual Christmas drive. Many of the younger visitors live up to their demographic group's other name -- "snowbirds" -- by dividing their time between multiple warm-weather havens, while the more senior seniors are more likely to buy property in Yuma and stay for most or all of the season. However they do it, they are indeed a rich addition to the community.

Yuma's Art Scene

Like a hearty plant flowering in our dry desert climate, art in all its genres thrives throughout the year in Yuma County.

Whether they want to take in a theater production or a concert, or try their hand in a painting class, the area's residents and visitors will find something in the arts scene that appeals to them.

Yuma County, like the rest of the nation was in the grips of the COVID-19 pandemic that forced the cancelation or suspension of many popular arts events. The public should check with organizers about the status of the following events and activities in the areas that are typically well-attended.

In Yuma, the Arts and Culture Division of the city's Parks and Recreation Department showcases the talents of local artists in exhibitions held throughout the year at the Yuma Art Center, 254 S. Main St.

The Parks and Recreation Department is well known for the outdoor recreational programs it hosts, but it also offers a variety of arts classes and programs, not only at the art center but at venues ranging from art galleries and classroom to recreational centers and parks.

Those who enjoy the performing arts have their pick from a variety of concerts, plays and other live performances staged throughout the year at the Historic Yuma Theatre, located next door to the art center.

The theater offers its stage both to local productions and to touring theatrical and musical groups from around the United States and other countries. Its long, colorful history has earned the Historic Yuma Theatre exposure around the state and country in publications such as USA Today as one of the neatest old "movie houses" in the nation.

Yuma boasts several theater companies that serve residents throughout the year with onstage comedy, drama and musical performances. Additionally, residents can enjoy performances during the school year from Arizona Western College Theater and local high schools. The Yuma Community Theater is the oldest continually operating community organization in Arizona, according to state records.

Audiences also enjoy the stylistic and energized performances of stage dancers who have perfected their routines and techniques as students in dance and ballet groups that call Yuma home. Ballet Yuma, Dance Etc., Dancemakers, Dawn's Dance Studio, Jazz of Yuma, Yuma Ballet Academy and Yuma Ballet Theatre and Performing Arts and Glam Dance Studio by Cindy are among the area dance studios and groups.

Local seniors and winter visitors also love the classes and dances offered by Golden Roadrunners and the Yuma Square and Round Dance Association.

Residents have no trouble finding good live music, whether they're devotees of rock, hip hop, ska, reggae, jazz, country, orchestral or classical music or something else. Bands and choirs from Arizona Western College and area high schools work hard throughout the year to perfect the performances they stage for the public.

Each winter for more than a decade, the Village Jazz Series has brought musicians from the national jazz scene to Yuma for free outdoor concerts at the Yuma Palms Regional Center. And for those who don't get their fill of jazz in the cooler months, Lutes Casino hosts summer jazz performances.

Music groups and studios in the Yuma area include AWC Chamber Singers, AWC Yuma Youth Choir, Cibola High School Performing Choir, Kofa High School Royales, String Ambassadors, the newly formed Desert Chamber Choir, Yuma Jazz Company and Yuma Orchestra Association.

For those who like them, Yuma has two fiddlers associations, the Yuma Old Time Fiddlers and Southwest Old Time Fiddlers.

Yuma's biggest offering of classical music takes place each winter at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, at 1550 S. 14th Ave. The church hosts around seven concerts each year, featuring accomplished vocalists and instrumentalists, the latter including pianists, cellists and organists.

The three casinos operated by both the Cocopah and Quechan tribes in the area also host national-level touring musical and comedy acts.

But music lovers aren't the only ones kept happy in Yuma. Local visual arts organizations also give creative folks the chance to make new friends, learn together, enjoy classes and workshops, and host various sales and exhibitions. Those groups include the Desert Artists of Yuma, Mountain Shadow Artists, the North End Artists' Co-operative, Potpourri Artists and Yuma Fine Arts Association. Exhibition space is also offered by the AWC Student Art Gallery and downtown at the nonprofit Village Art Gallery.

Since 1980, the Yuma Art Symposium has brought artists from around the nation to Yuma for several days of presentations, workshops and public events.

Yuma also has two movie theater complexes: Regency Main Street Cinemas and Harkins Theatres. Additionally, from August through May, AWC presents foreign films each month in its Thursday at the Theatre film series.

Educating Yuma

Yuma County boasts more than 60 public, charter, private and pre-K schools and is known for its innovation and collaboration in educating children.

“There are many things that make our schools great in Yuma County,” says Tom Tyree, Yuma County Superintendent of Schools. Tyree’s office is the fiscal agent for public school districts in the county. The office also conducts an annual science and engineering fair and holds a Scripps-eligible spelling bee for the county.

“Yuma County schools have a reputation around the state of Arizona for being very innovative,” Tyree continued. “Districts collaborate very well together to offer world-class education programs for our students.”

The county has 10 public school districts with a student population of about 38,000 in public, private, charter and home schools. The county has eight private schools, three of which belong to the Diocese of Tucson: St. Francis of Assisi and Immaculate Conception School (both K-8) and a college preparatory high school, Yuma Catholic. The five other private schools are Yuma Lutheran, Freedom Baptist Academy, Southwestern Christian, Yuma Adventist Christian School and the Learning Pad Christian Preschool and Kindergarten. Yuma County also has an active home-school network, Home Educators of Yuma.

A school district can encompass preschool through grade eight, or be kindergarten through sixth grade, or just have ninth through 12th grades, as does the Yuma Union High School District which has six campuses.

“The commitment to children and the education of our Yuma County students is unmatched,” says YUHSD Superintendent Gina Thompson.

Yuma Union is the home of the Ready Now, Yuma initiative, which focuses on developing the skills of each individual student so that they may be able to succeed to their maximum potential.

“Equity of opportunity is the action supported by the belief that every student is college, career and community prepared when graduating from YUHSD 70,” Thompson says. “The community supports safe, clean and efficient campuses by continuing to support investments through bonds and donation. Yuma promotes every student academically and in the arts and athletics. Yuma, Arizona, is a special place.”

Yuma County is also home to several charter schools, some with branch campuses in Somerton and San Luis, Ariz. Schools include: AzTec High School; AmeriSchools Academy (North and South campuses); Carpe Diem Collegiate High School and Middle School (online as well); Desert View Academy; Desert View Middle and High School; Educational Opportunity Center Charter School - YPIC; Harvest Preparatory Academy; PPEP TEC Somerton; and PPEP TEC San Luis.

“Yuma is filled with caring parents, innovative educators and a collaborative community that passionately supports education,” says Crane Schools Superintendent Laurie Doering. “In order to effectively serve Yuma students, Yuma’s educational professionals focus on making growth mandatory—for ourselves as educators, as well as for our students.”

Sorting the ins and outs of the education system here may feel confusing to those who are from outside the region. Seven of the county school districts serve elementary grades PreK-8. Two districts serve 9th-12th grades, and the county boasts a joint technical education district that augments the two high school districts. It is known as the Southwest Technical Education District of Yuma, or STEDY, for short.

“At the Southwest Technical Educational District of Yuma, we’re preparing today’s students for tomorrow’s workforce,” says Kevin Imes, the district’s superintendent.

STEDY provides tuition-free career and technical education to public high school sophomores, juniors, and seniors, helping them to get a jump-start on their future, Imes says. Students can earn an industry-recognized standard certificate in many different programs and enter the workforce immediately upon graduation, or continue with post-secondary education using their college credits earned through STEDY to get ahead, Imes continued.

One of STEDY’s partners is Arizona Western College, where students 17 and younger pay just $25 per credit. The program started under AWC President Dr.

Daniel Corr as part of its strategic plan to increase the bachelor-degree attainment rate in the region. The fruits of this effort are expected to begin showing up in the upcoming 2020 Census. AWC has an enrollment of about 12,000.

An example of the collaborative efforts is the partnerships AWC has formed with Arizona’s Big 3 universities. Northern Arizona University-Yuma, which is celebrating 30 years in Yuma, the University of Arizona-Yuma and Arizona State University @ Yuma all now are offering programs at the AWC campus with regional tuition pricing in an attempt to bring college-level learning to where people live.

Technology in the classroom is a must for Yuma County’s school districts. YUHSD started purchasing netbooks for students (in lieu of textbooks) in 2011, while students in District One received iPads in 2015. Both districts have kept up with those purchases.

Schools in the Crane School District have completed five years of being part of the Apple ConnectED grant, meaning each student has access to an iPad, and the district is continuing that access. Somerton Middle School students received iPads in 2016 with funds from a bond measure. Students in Gadsden School District are also part of the Apple ConnectEd grant.

Students in the high schools are also choosing to combine college and career readiness, as more students enrolled in CTE/JTED courses than ever before, said Thompson. More than 1,000 students were enrolled in both an Advanced Placement course and a CTE/JTED course this year, a phenomenon unheard of six years ago, and a rarity occurrence in other high schools in the state and nation. More students than ever before are taking Advanced Placement courses.

Community partnerships are also playing a role in Yuma County education.

After an investment by the Gowan Company in the Crane School District, Gowan Science Academy, the district’s STEM school, was named an Apple Innovation School in 2017 and scored in the top percentiles on its state exams.

With AWC’s Dr. Corr having a firm plan on molding a “college-going culture” here, the future is bright for Yuma County’s students.

Fishing Holes

It doesn't matter if you like to take the helm of a bass boat equipped with a powerful outboard engine and all the latest fish-catching accessories, or if you're happy lounging in a chair at water's edge, fishing rod in hand.

If you like fishing - or if you think you'd like to take up the sport - you have plenty of places around the Yuma area to choose from.

There are lakes and the Colorado River, as well as ponds within the Yuma and Somerton city limits. Common to all these fishing holes are the largemouth bass, catfish and panfish, while the urban ponds are stocked with rainbow trout in the winter months.

Courtesy of the Arizona Game and Fish Department, here's a list of places to go fishing in Yuma County:

Outdoor Adventure

In Yuma, there are a variety of opportunities to get outside and enjoy Mother Nature. From water fun in the Colorado River to off-road and hiking trails, Yuma has much to offer anyone who does not mind getting a bit sandy or wet!

The Imperial Sand Dunes National Recreation Area draws thousands of visitors and year-round residents alike to its off-road and camping opportunities. The Bureau of Land Management requires permits for camping and use of the dunes. Permits can be purchased at the Cahuilla and Buttercup Ranger Stations or you can purchase an Imperial Sand Dunes Permit from several local travel centers, gas stations and off-road shops.

The Imperial Sand Dunes are stars in their own right, having been the site for several movies, fashion shoots and commercials. You may have seen them in Star Wars: Return of the Jedi, Spaceballs and The Scorpion King.

The Colorado River offers fun and excitement for people of all ages and experience levels. One can hang out along the shores for an afternoon of relaxation or get a bit more adventurous with boating, kayaking or water skiing.

The Colorado River above Imperial Dam offers several recreation areas:

Squaw Lake: A mile upstream from Imperial Dam, Squaw Lake is a premier developed recreation site. The lake is a popular day use and camping area, with holiday weekends attracting large crowds.

Senator Wash Dam & Reservoir: Senator Wash Dam and Reservoir is located about 18 miles northeast of Yuma, on the California side of the Colorado River two miles upstream from Imperial Dam and at the river-end of Senator Wash. This is a popular day use area.

Martinez Lake Recreation Area: There are over 90 miles of unrestricted river access available for boating, skiing, fishing and playing on the Colorado River upstream from Imperial Dam to Blythe. To access the boat launches to get onto the river, head north on Highway 95 past the 'big guns' at YPG, turn left on Martinez Lake Road. Turn left to Fisher's Landing and right to Lake Martinez Resort.

The river below the Imperial Dam is enjoyed by river-goers who like to play along the shoreline or take advantage of the quiet beauty and steady current. Bring your inner tube, kayaks, canoes and fishing poles along with your ice chest and sunscreen to enjoy the warm weather and cool water.

Popular recreation spots that have river access include:

Many parks in Yuma include concrete walking tracks in their layouts, and the city of Somerton is gradually developing a system of andadores, or walking tracks, that will enable people to walk or bike from one end of the city to the other.

Trails within Yuma include the 5-mile-long Colorado River Trail, which follows the river bank from the West Wetlands Park at 22nd Avenue and Water Street to East Wetlands Park.

it's about time

Time spent searching for adventure, not searching for a doctor

That's why we've recruited 61 new physicians to our community. And we're not done yet. This means fewer days to get in to see a physician and less travel for specialty care. It also means expanded hours and more locations, making it easier to get the care you need from the providers you trust.
